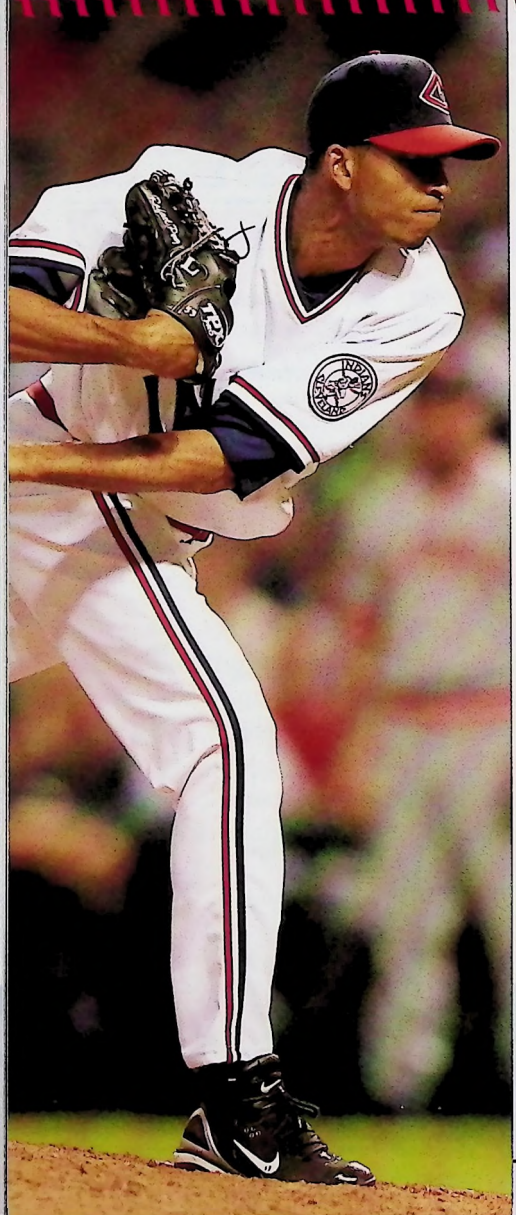
Can't put a price on Perez's value

Lights-out lefty a big asset for the Tribe, plus his family

By Anthony Castrovince / MLB.com



Rafael Perez isn't just fending for himself when he takes the mound. He's got his family back home in the Dominican Republic to think about, too.

Perez's father, Jose Fa, doesn't work. That makes the 25-year-old Perez the provider for his family members in Santo Domingo.

"They depend on me," Perez said.

And so do the Indians.

Without the left-handed Perez lending a helping hand to veterans Joe Borowski and Rafael Betancourt in the back end of the Tribe's bullpen, it's questionable whether the club would be thrust into the thick of the American League Central standings this late in the season.

Plucked out of the Triple-A Buffalo rotation and called up to the Majors on May 28, Perez was only expected to be with the Indians for a few days, while they carried 13 pitchers.

Quickly, though, he proved his second stay with the big league team this season wouldn't be a short one. He threw two innings of scoreless relief in Fenway Park against the Red Sox on May 29 and another scoreless inning against the Tigers at home on May 31.

From that point, all Perez has done is ease himself into one of the team's most prominent relief roles.

"He's not only a guy who has had unbelievable success against lefties, but he gets righties out as well," pitching coach Carl Willis said. "If Rafael Betancourt needs a day, we feel confident using [Perez]."

Perez has certainly rewarded his club's faith in him, especially in the second half. He has put up a *1.10 ERA in 13 appearances since the All-Star break, and he has 42 strikeouts against just 10 walks in 40 2/3 innings of work overall (*Stats as of August 16).

"I'm getting confidence each day as I go," Perez said through bullpen catcher Dennis Malave, acting as an interpreter. "Going out to the games and being able to do well gives the coaches confidence in me, and that gives me self-confidence."

Perez had reason to be confident after the '06 season, in which he made his Major League debut and pitched fairly well, compiling a 4.38 ERA in 18 appearances and limiting the opposition to a .204 average against.

But in the wake of that season, the Indians wanted Perez to refine his pitches. That's why they had him start games in the Dominican Winter League and in Buffalo.

While stretched out as a starter, Perez had the flexibility to work on his hard, sinking fastball, as well as his slider and two-seamer.

"He has a lot more trust in his fastball and the ability to sink his fastball on the plate or early in the count," Willis said. "That's been a big help for him, because it's eliminated [hitters'] ability to look for it in just one area. He's been tremendous. It's hard for him not to build confidence doing what he's doing."

Perez's success has allowed the Indians to ease up on their use of Betancourt, who has a long injury history.

"He got a shot, and he got that kind of job," Betancourt said of Perez. "He's able to do it, and hopefully, we'll see him able to do that job the rest of the season. That's what we need."

Watching his fellow members of the 'pen, such as Betancourt, go about their business has helped Perez learn on the job. He's also taken quite a liking to working with catcher Victor Martinez.

"He's been able to read my mind," Perez said. "He's able to visualize the way to face hitters."

Perez probably never visualized himself pitching in the Majors when he was a young boy in the Dominican. He didn't take up baseball until he was

"He's able to do it, and hopefully, we'll see him able to do that job the rest of the season. That's what we need."

— Rafael Betancourt

16, as his true passion until that point was basketball. Perez was a tall and lanky first baseman when the Indians morphed him into a pitcher in their Dominican academy.

Perez's family is certainly happy he's found success in the sport. It is, after all, helping to put bread on the table.

"But they're also happy to see me healthy, having fun and enjoying what I'm doing," Perez said, "and having success at such a young age."

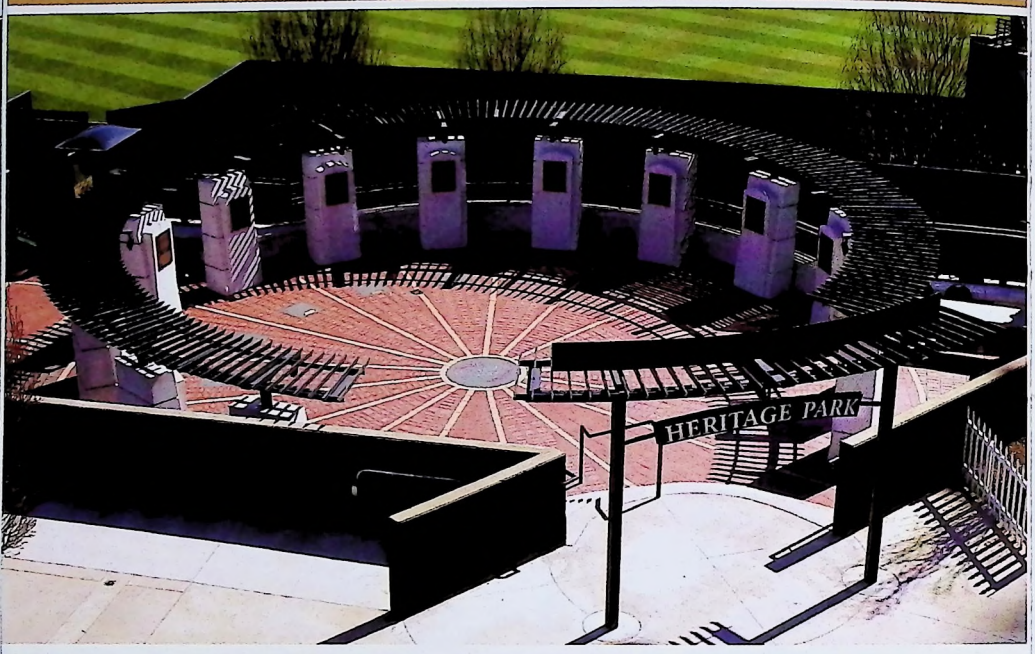
Preserving Indians History

By Chuck Murr



Not only can fans cheer their current heroes on the field, but they now can connect with past favorites at the new Heritage Park, which honors the greatest moments and finest players in the illustrious history of Cleveland Indians baseball.

"With our rich history, for us to have a monument park style setting that fans can access during the game has truly added another element to the total fan experience," said Bob DiBiasio, the Indians' Vice President of Public Relations.

Youngsters can learn about the past while long-time fans recapture memories by strolling through the two-tier Heritage Park before, during and after games. Amid shade trees tucked away behind the center field wall, they will find a unique open-air monument park that includes tributes to members of the team's Hall of Fame (27 and counting); the most memorable moments in club history (38, with team officials believing the best is yet to come); and a section honoring the Top 100 Indians from the franchise's first 100 years (1901-2000).

"Grandfathers can bring their grandkids and teach them some history about the great game of baseball," said Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Feller, 88. "Baseball is America. It's a game with a lot of history and we should all be proud of it. It may have been a long time since Cleveland has won a World Series, but this franchise has had a lot of wonderful moments and I'm proud to say that I'm part of it."

DiBiasio said there were three primary reasons as to why the Indians were eager to develop Heritage Park:

- TO PRESERVE THE RICH TRADITION OF CLEVELAND INDIANS HISTORY
- TO HONOR THE EXCELLENCE OF GREAT PLAYERS AND MOMENTS
- TO CONNECT THE GENERATIONS

"The design element was chosen to honor excellence," DiBiasio said. "The objective was to create a signature landmark area. Yankee Stadium has its Monument Park and now the signature landmark of Jacobs Field is Heritage Park."

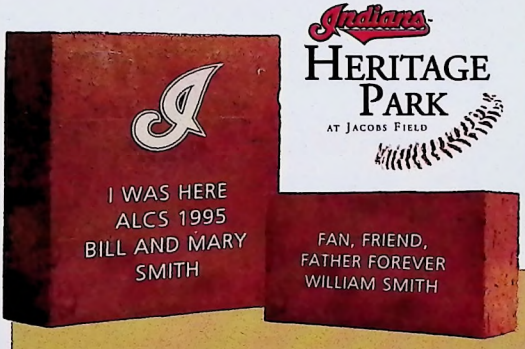
The upper tier of the $1 million complex houses a rotunda honoring the 15 members of the Cleveland Indians Hall of Fame who are also enshrined in the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

The lower tier honors the remaining 12 members of the Indians Hall of Fame. A number of memorable moments in Tribe history are also on display throughout Heritage Park. Four new members of the Indians Hall of Fame will be inducted on Saturday, August 11 vs. New York.

A special feature of the facility is a monument to Indians Hall of Fame member Ray Chapman, which is on display for the first time in decades. Chapman died one day after being struck in the head by a pitch on Aug. 16, 1920. A plaque honoring the shortstop, who is the only major leaguer to die from an in-game injury, was proudly displayed at old League Park. When the ballclub moved to Cleveland Stadium, the plaque was put into a box for storage and never uncovered. It was transported to Jacobs Field in 1994, where it was discovered this winter.

"It's going back on permanent display," DiBiasio said of the tribute to Chapman, who before his death at age 29 was among the best players in the American League for several seasons. "Today's fans are familiar with the heroes they have seen play, like Grady Sizemore, Omar Vizquel, Sandy Alomar (Jr.) and so many others. But players like Chapman, Addie Joss, Stan Coveleski, Larry Doby and so many more are an important part of Cleveland Indians lore."

Osborn Architects & Engineers (builders of old Cleveland Stadium in 1931) and Neshkin Construction Company designed and built Heritage Park with several other area sub-contractors also involved.



Fans and Corporate Partners also are taking part through a brick-paver program similar to that used outside the Ballpark before Jacobs Field opened in 1994. Brick locations are still available to the public for placement prior to Opening Day 2008 by visiting indians.com.
